

Transcribed & edited by Francis Bevan ~ February 2022

Transposed down a tone for Geek Night. V6 (third verse of polyphony) uses music from Esquivel's setting of Exultet cælum laudibus (Comm. Apost.) which appears later in the same book and uses the same tune. Accidentals above noteheads are editorial. All others present in source. Brackets above notes indicate original ligatures.

Defensor alme Hispaniæ, Jacobe vindex hostium;
Tonitruí quem filium Dei vocabit Filius.
Huc cæli ab altis sedibus Converte dexter lumina,
Audique læti debitas Grates tibi quas solvimus.
Grates refert Hispania, Felix tuo quæ nomine
Te gloriatur jugiter Dignata sacris ossibus.
Tu, cæca nox atque impia Nos cum teneret vanitas,
Lucem salutis primitus Oris Iberis impetas.
Tu, bella cum nos cingerent, Es visus ipso in prælio,
Equoque et ense acerimus Mauros furentes sternere.
Freti tuo nos pignore, Largum tuo te munere
Rogamus omnes ut tuæ Spe protegas præsentiaæ.
Deo Patri sit gloria Eiusque soli Filio,
Cum Spiritu Paraclito, Et nunc, et omne in sæculum.
Amen.

Kind defender of Spain and scourge of your people's enemies,
James, whom the Son of the living God called Son of Thunder.

From heaven, beam down your kindly light,
and listen to the rejoicing with which we thank you.
Knowing your celestial place, and blessed with your exalted name,
Spain glories without cease, honoured with your sacred bones.
When the blindness of night and perverse vanity had us in their grasp,
it was you who first brought light to the Iberian shores.
When harsh war encompassed us, it was you who, in the midst of battle, appeared on horseback with your sword to vanquish the fury of the Moors.
Confident in your pledge and in your bountiful gifts,
we ask you to shield us in the hope of your presence.
All praise to God the Father, and to his only Son,
and to the Holy Spirit, now and for ever.
Amen.
